I shop for jootis in Chandni Chowk: Nitish Bharadwaj

Actor Nitish Bharadwaj, best known for his portrayal of Lord Krishna in the television series Mahabharat, was recently in Delhi to play the same iconic role in his Hindi play, Chakravayuh.

Nitish Bharadwaj

"I usually visit Delhi twice a month for my plays or to meet my friends in the Parliament. While the capital provides a view of Rajput, Mughal and colonial architecture, Mumbai only has colonial structures. Delhi has more greenery," says the former MP.

Nitish, who loves roaming around in Delhi, added, "I eat at Paranthe Wali Gali, shop for jootis in Chandni Chowk and buy books at Khan Market. I also like shopping in CP and hang out a lot at Delhi Gymkhana, where I play tennis. I also love going to the Jhandewalan temple." But he hates the 'arrogance' of Delhiites. "People here take pride in breaking rules, and somehow everyone is related to the PM! Also, when I attend parties, it seems like everyone is trying to judge you and assess your worth," he said.
